**Updating:** When working on a sequence of images, particularly a photograph, it is not uncommon to find that two or more image files have been edited by an identical adjustment. To easily identify which version of an image was edited last, the quickest way to see when a file was edited is to check the creation date. This may be found in the upper-left corner of the image or on the top of a layer or the Layers palette. If you'd like to edit the creation date manually, you can access it through the right-click menu in the Layers palette. You can do this while the image is open in the background or even when it is not open. # **Artistic Elements** The PSD file format saves all layers as an illustration known as a `_group_` on its own. This allows you to adjust and mix multiple layers, and the ability to store all of those layers makes the file large. Since all layers are included in the same file with a single file type, they can be opened in any Adobe program. If you'd rather work on a single layer in Photoshop, you can simply create a new document that is large enough to contain that layer or a grouping of layers. You can then pull that layer out and place it into the new document. The following is a closer look at some of the layer properties you can work with. ## **Layers** To add a new layer, click on the New Layer button at the top of the Layers palette. You can create a new layer by using the Layer Filter if you need to apply a special type of layer. Each layer consists of a series of pixels that have information about how they are to be processed. See Figure 5-18. You can then go to the Layers palette and examine each layer. You can edit the settings for layers such as their blending modes, opacity, color and size settings. When you need to reduce the number of layers, you can use the Layer Mask. If a layer is hidden, you can bring it to the front by using the Layer Mask button at the bottom of the Layers palette. **Figure 5-18** Layers are comprised of individual pixels. ## **Layer Modes** There are two types of setting you can create for a layer. The first is the type, which allows you to create a regular layer (such as a layer that has a gradient fill),

Anti-choice Rep. Mark Meadows (R-NC) said women aborting babies shouldn't be given anything because it "reduces the demand" for abortion. Asked by fellow Rep. Mark Walker (R-NC) if he would support giving women who abort babies $2,500, Meadows said, "Those aren't the kind of people I want to give more money to." Rep. Phil Roe (R-TN) also criticized the Planned Parenthood fundraiser's donation to Meadows' political action committee, despite the fact that the organization has supported the anti-choice agenda of both Republicans and Democrats. Walker asked, "Do you think that there is such a thing as life, or is it a human body that has a life?" Meadows said, "I have a strong moral stand on what I believe is a human being at the moment of conception, and should not be destroyed at that time." "I do not believe if you are a woman and are in the process of terminating that it is something that I would think you should be given money for — reducing the demand for abortion, which is something I've been proud to fight against," he added. WATCH: The congressman's comments are reminiscent of those made by Kyle Duncan, who was recently featured on the far-right Family Research Council's radio show. Duncan suggested that fetuses and babies who are aborted were killed because of "sin and sinfulness and immorality." "There's a reason why abortion exists," he continued. "There's a reason why abortion is a practice of the most immoral and cruel people on the planet." "Abortion is about sin and sinfulness and immorality — that's why it's illegal. And it's not just the unborn that are the victims of the abortion industry, the idea that an individual has a right to kill an innocent life, killing a baby is a very violent act," Duncan added. program provides grants to organizations that improve public transit in underserved communities in B.C. As of August 2016, there are more than 727,000 weekly transit trips per weekday that include transit on the SkyTrain network, and more than 400,000 Sunday/holiday trips. SkyTrain provides 72 percent of the province's commuter rail travel. To qualify for a grant, organizations must be based within the transportation planning area outlined in the grant application.

Participating organizations may also select if they wish to focus on the fast-growing regions of Richmond, Delta or Langley, or if they are looking to support accessible transportation in a specific community or neighbourhood. The B.C. government also allocated $2 million in funding for Vancouver's SkyTrain extension to Arbutus Street, which will add one train station and seven additional vehicles to the existing east-west corridor. When the project is completed in 2024, it will increase capacity by 27,000 weekday riders and 16,000 daily trips. The program was proposed in last year's budget, and the grants were first announced in October 2015. The program is administered by the Ministry of Finance. There are four major rail corridors in Metro

Vancouver, and from north to south these include:/* * Copyright 2018 The WebRTC project authors.
