the podcast includes interviews with people who are more knowledgeable about indesign than the average it pro, and – unusually for a podcast – it includes a few guests who have only a very minimal knowledge of indesign, and so provide interesting feedback. they also add a lot of the latest relevant news stories.

trying to make a good design for a mobile app does not mean simply showing the users the app will look like on a big screen. for instance, many people like the look of the iphone (or other) apps on their ipad but they are unhappy with the result because the two devices are so different. well, that was the thought behind adobe's first dedicated video companion of "the future of design and development". available now on the app store. developed in conjunction with adobe, adobe design lab provides a front-to-back view of how to take your design to the next level. it provides the information you need to realize your app or website design plan. watch video tutorials from adobe product experts to learn how to leverage the same methods and techniques designers use every day. enter text into the search box and watch videos related to the topic. you can sort the videos and filter them by channel and date. with adobe xd you can easily share your work with anyone. the seamless
